SYNOPSIS:	Neriman is a young woman, who was raised with intense and traditional moral values emphasizing the importance of being a good wife and mother in life. Although she grew up in a traditional community in the Fatih district of Istanbul, Neriman is an intelligent, cultured, and highly perceptive girl. Neriman is loving and helpful to everyone due to living a protected life without knowing the evil in the world. Her parents have been considering that Neriman will marry Şinasi, who is a fine arts student living in the same neighbourhood. Neriman and Şinasi have been friends since their childhood and they both study at Istanbul University. Şinasi comes from a conservative family and embraces the culture that he inherits. In contrast to him, Neriman is interested in the modern culture supporting active roles for women in society. Feeling stuck in Fatih, Neriman cannot stop herself from constantly criticizing the mentality of the people around her. When Neriman visits her relatives living in Harbiye, she has the chance of experiencing a more modern side of the city as this is the district where the upper class of society lives. One day, Neriman meets Macit, who is the only heir of a large holding in Harbiye. She immediately gets attracted by Macit's modern lifestyle. As they start seeing each other, Neriman's relationship with Şinasi gets affected. However, Neriman starts realizing that she is also critical of Macit's lifestyle decisions and ethical views, which causes her to rediscover the good in her relationship with Şinasi. Eventually, Neriman goes back to Şinasi to rescue their relationship.
