SYNOPSIS:	Macide, a university-educated psychologist hailing from a low-income family, yearns to heal others using her father's methods despite having experience in corporate life. Driven by her ambition, she relocates to Istanbul, unknowing that her life will be transformed by unforeseen events and romantic entanglements. On the day of her departure, Macide encounters Ahmet on the train, who instantly falls for her. Yet, Macide finds herself attracted to Ahmet's older brother, Kazım Işık, the country's top businessman. Despite his professional success, Kazım seeks inner peace and happiness, a quest complicated by his wife Nermin's depression and substance abuse, and the grief of losing their child. Before the impending sale of his self-established pharmaceutical giant, and his run for Health Minister, Kazım grapples with succession planning for his company. During this challenging period, Macide enters his life as Ahmet's love interest, and as she supports Kazım through his most vulnerable moments, she develops an intense, unrequited love for him. Despite being married, Kazım finds himself drawn towards Macide, causing a romantic rivalry between him and Ahmet, triggering Ahmet's history of troubled relationships and igniting competition with his idolized brother. "Poison Ivy" tells the story of a young woman experiencing her first love and a man seeking to lighten his life's darkness. Their mutual longing for healing and solace intertwines their lives, but they remain unaware that this connection may not hold the solutions they've been seeking for their personal predicaments.
