SYNOPSIS:	In “Valley of Hearts”, Sumru, who abandoned her twin children at birth without a second thought, has reinvented herself. Now living in Cappadocia with her influential husband Samet, a powerful figure in the tourism industry, she has built a seemingly perfect life with their two children, Harika and Esat. However, the past never truly stays buried. Nuh and Melek, the twins Sumru left behind, have grown up with a deep resentment toward their mother who deserted them. Upon learning the truth about their origins from their dying grandmother, they embark on a mission to reclaim what they believe is theirs. As Nuh and Melek arrive in Cappadocia, tensions rise within the Şansalan family. Samet's son from a previous marriage, Cihan, returns from Berlin, reigniting rivalries with his half-brother Esat. At the same time, Sumru's sister-in-law schemes to marry off her daughter Sevilay to Cihan, even as Sevilay resists. Although Sevilay doesn't really know, she is not actually Cihan's cousin, which is the reason why Cihan accepted to be married to her. Meanwhile, Harika's jealousy of Sevilay's beauty leads her to plot against the potential marriage. While Sumru fights to keep her estranged children from disrupting her carefully curated life, Nuh and Melek find themselves entangled in unexpected romances. Melek catches the eye of Cihan, while Sevilay crosses paths with Nuh, complicating matters further. As old secrets come to light and new relationships form, love, betrayal, and the weight of past mistakes threaten to tear the Şansalan family apart.
