SYNOPSIS:	"Wild Women of Anatolia" brings together the stories of five women from different generations and beliefs across various regions of Turkey. From four generations of women harvesting hazelnuts on the misty slopes of the Black Sea, to Aslı, who runs a historic coffeehouse in the heart of Istanbul, defying male dominance; from Hira, who gives birth alone guided by nature on the Aegean coast, to Hatice, searching for her childhood in the Alevi-Kurdish plains of Muş; and Arya, fighting for trans rights in Ankara this documentary portrays the quest for freedom through the deep connections these women have with nature. Following the courage, resistance, and determination of women labeled as "mad," the film invites everyone to listen to the women of Anatolia and their nature-bound stories. Each woman's story is associated with one of the four classical elements. fire, water, earth, and air and all characters ultimately unite under the element of "air." The starting point of the film is the question: "What is your dream of freedom?"
